An institution set up in the early 70's is always an asset as it not only has imbibed values of a generation but also gets into a technologically developed era. The college has crossed many milestones and is advancing towards the Golden Jubilee celebrations.

The institution which was started with the Philanthropic contribution from Nagarathamma Meda Kasturiranga Setty in 1971 as a PU College became a First Grade College in 1973. Nearly five decades have passed, and the college has still retained its values, principles and ethics and continues with its relentless service of providing education to women.

With the advancement of technology, the college has become highly ICT and tech savvy. Student have access to Wi-Fi, internet and various other services. In fact, the institution has developed exponentially. The college being student friendly, their requirements are met in no time. One such important aspect is the single-window access to the Examination system; after the college became 'Autonomous' in the year 2006, the college was granted 'Academic Autonomy' by the UGC and the Bangalore University, which means the college has the freedom academically and the right to conduct examinations and declare results. However, the degree is given by the Bangalore University since the college is affiliated to the University.

More than a decade has gone by after 'Autonomy' and we have a great future to look forward to with the college turning '50' in a short span of time. It will be time, when we need to nostalgically remember the contribution of the staff, students and stakeholders of the institution. Lets' look forward to it and Vartha Vahini will continue to document every activity of the college.

BOOK : THE CURSE OF SURYA

AUTHOR : DEV PRASAD

PUBLICATION DATE : MAY 2015

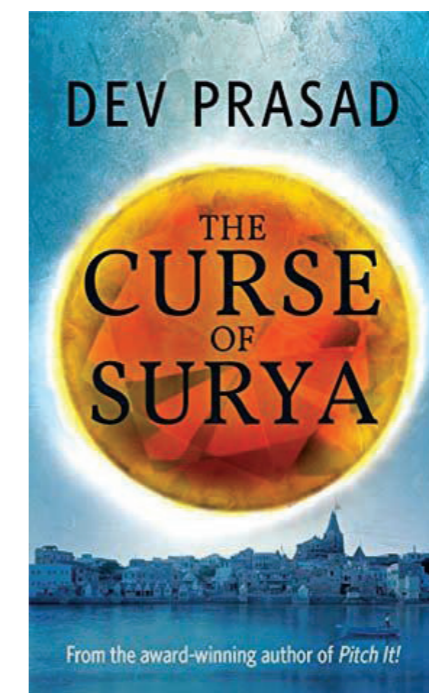

PUBLISHER :

RANDOM HOUSE PUBLISHERS
INDIA PVT. LTD

PAGES: 320

There are several books on the racks today which take us on jaw-dropping rides to places, times, contexts and stories which we could never have believed to be possible. Dev Prasad, after his hits like Krishna: A Journey through the Lands and Legends of Krishna and Pitch it!, is here with another mind-boggling adventure which places contemporary themes and ideas in a mythological journey. In "The Curse of Surya" the characters offer a variety in taste, thinking, motives, driving factors and also cultural and ethnic differences. However, the story takes off and reaches its climax in a perfect circular fashion.

Sangeeta, an Indian woman in her late twenties and working in a top-notch Singapore News Channel 7, has beauty and wits. Reluctantly, she sacrifices her trip to Europe planned with her friends to cover an important official meeting in Agra. She is intrigued by the All Saints' World Conference in Mathura, and the promise of an ascetic to reveal the location of the famously infamous Syamantaka Gem. This jewel of troubles, rumored to be powerful enough to bring in war amongst nations, if found, also offers various economic prospects. A terrorist attack leaves her and her new-found, attractive acquaintance, Prof. Alan Davies and a Frenchman Anton Blanchard hot in trail of the Syamantaka. To add to all that the trio are under suspicion of causing the blast in the conference. Things turn haywire for the other protagonist of this tale, SP Nisha Sharma, who is committed and immaculate. A code, 48 hours to beat the enemy trying to catch hold of the gem and her deepening interest in Alan makes Sangeeta reevaluate her life. The novel makes us experience a journey both exhilarating and dangerous, with an unknown enemy offering a series of betrayals.

Dev Prasad manages to keep the reader engaged throughout the tale by using multiple points of views, mostly using an impersonal cue between subsections to create mental links in the readers' minds and portray how one cannot be aware of lurking danger. Simple language, fast-paced actions, amazing and unexpected twists finally concludes in a dramatic climax bringing an end to every doubt of the future of the characters. Romance, myth and adventure brew. Simply speaking, grab it as soon as you can.

'CHAMAK' RECREATES SUNI'S MAGIC

SHARADHI RAJ III- BA

Suni, who is well-known for his works, Simple Agi Ondu Love Story and Operation Alamelamma, is once again back with his new comedy drama Chamak.

Suni, conveying an old story line in the movie, adds his own flavour of comedy and drama and garnishes it with his most popular one-line dialogues.

The story begins with the introduction of Ganesh as Kush, a Gynaecologist by profession and a party animal who leads a carefree life. He is pressurised for marriage by his family members and finds Kushi (Rashmika), an event manager and also a party animal like him. Not willing to give up their obsession for party and alcohol, Kush and Kushi get into wedlock by hiding their interests and being innocent before each other. Things take a turn for the worse, when they both discover the truth. They decide to part ways, but agree to stay as friends. Friendship turning into love becomes the crux of the story. However, unexpected family intervention leads to a big emotional drama.

The first half of the movie lacked seriousness in the story whereas the second half consisted of dramatic sequences.

Ganesh, with his acting skills, helped the audience stick to their Santhosh's cinematography and Suni's directorial skills is worth appreciating.

To conclude, Chamak is fun filled, joyous and humourous movie, with a good amount of family drama.

FROM THE PRINCIPAL'S DESK

Dr. M.N. Vani was felicitated by the College and the Management on the occasion of her superannuation.

As George Bernard Shaw says, 'progress is impossible without change,' it is true that, this is the high time that the College introduces some necessary changes in the College. As we are due for the fourth cycle of assessment and accreditation by NAAC in 2020-21, the Internal Quality Assessment Cell has chalked out some programmes in improving the standards of academics. We are in the process of evolving a strong internal assessment programme which will help us to improve the quality of academics and also gear up to face the NAAC with more confidence.

As change is the law of life, the current issue of Vartha Vahini is witnessing an inevitable change. Dr. M. N. Vani, former Head of the Department of Journalism who edited this news letter for nearly three decades has attained superannuation in October, 2017. Through her commitment, dedication, hard work and passion, she has set high standards not only in teaching Journalism and Communication, but also in bringing out the Vartha Vahini. From the last 45 years, Vartha Vahini is being published continuously and the contribution of Dr. Vani is highly commendable. In her 34 years of service in the college, she is recognized by her colleagues and students as a highly ethical and principled teacher. As an ardent follower of the principles of Late Dr. C.N. Mangala, the first Principal of the College, Dr. Vani has worked honestly in imbibing the same among the different generation of students. It is highly appreciable that she would readily accept all the responsibilities of the College and the management and complete them successfully before the deadline.

Dr. Vani brought out Vartha Vahini on time, even when the technology was not so advanced. From a traditionally designed Black and White to the most vibrantly designed colour copy of Vartha Vahini, her journey with Vartha Vahini is incredible. She has handed over the responsibility of editing the Vartha Vahini to a group of youngsters led by Manoj B A, HoD of Journalism, who is trained under her for nearly 5 years. I hope this new team ensures that the legacy of Dr. C. N. Mangala followed by Dr. Vani will be continued with utmost care and responsibility. I wish Dr. M N Vani, a happy, healthy and peaceful retired life. Also, best wishes to the new editorial team.

Happy reading . . . !
